Sports Parade

By HENRY McLEMORE

NEW YORK. (UP)—The man is a popoff, a showoff, and a know-it-all.

He outstruts the peacock and outbrays the jackass.

He is vain to the point of megalomania, not to mention tactless, indiscreet, and careless of the feelings of others.

But you have to go for him; you can't help it. No matter what sort of fellow he is outside of the ball park, Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, the ol' cottonpicker, is a flannel-ful of man when he digs his spikes in a pitching hill.

That goes just as strongly today as it did a few years back when his throwing arm knew no ailments, and he could coil and last it to smoke his pitches through the slot. He was a heroic figure of a baseball player then, with his burning fast ball, his curves that broke with the sharpness of waves on a rock, and his tantalizing perfect change of pace.

You had to go for him then because he had class and the nerve of a burglar. He threw to a batter's strength as often as he did to his weakness, defying the batsman to hit even what he liked when it was thrown by Dizzy. Remember him against Greenberg in the world series with Detroit?

He was a workhouse, too. When he didn't start he stood by to relieve. And he had a heart, a gamecock's heart. That was probably the Dizzy one's characteristic when he had all his stuff. He fed on crucial mo-

FACTOGRAPHS

Red hair is more commonly found in Scotland than in any other country in the world.

The word "cucumbers" comes from "cowcucumbers," which were so called because cattle were extremely fond of them.

The number of icebergs in the north Atlantic is not the same every year. Some years there may be only 10 or 11, at others as many as 1,000 or more.

During 1938, almost 35,000 persons—enough to populate a good-sized city—met death in automobile accidents.

Alexander the Great outlawed beards among his soldiers because they were so frequently grabbed by enemy soldiers.

ments, seemed to draw speed and cunning from an atmosphere charged with dynamite.

He hasn't changed. He still is at his best—the one sign of a champion—when he is on the spot.

Take that game with Brooklyn last week. The finger was on him when he went to the firing line, squarely on him. In his four previous starts he had been knocked out, and there had been that mysterious accident in the east in which his arm had been cut, and which had seen him sent on to Chicago ahead of his team.

He was carrying a heavy load when he walked out on the hill, not only of his own, but of the Cubs', too, because a defeat would have dropped the team into the second division.

He didn't take much of an arm out to the pitching slab with him, but the heart was the same old quality and the same size that beat for him in the better days. Slowly, carefully, he threw that "nothing ball" up to the plate—that same old "nothing ball" that came so close to beating the mighty Yanks in the last world series. Now high, now low, now picking at this corner, now picking at that corner, Dizzy didn't yield a hit in four innings, and only five over the entire game.

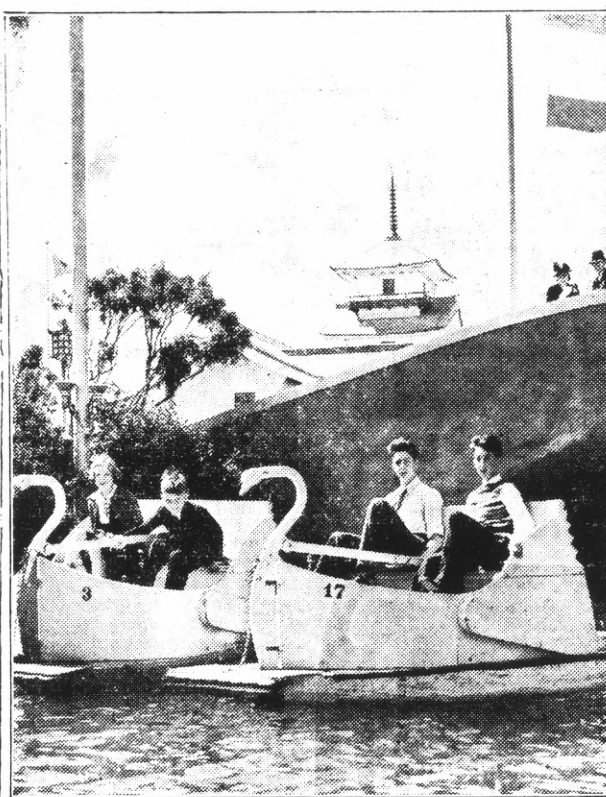

As I said before, you must go for a man like that and you must keep on going for him as long as courage and spirit and nerve rate as virtues. Ol' Diz has his faults, and in abundance, but he leaves 'em in his locker on the days he goes out to pitch. With his flannels on, a whacking good slice of cut plug in his jaw, the red dust of the mound under his feet, and a batter looking him in the eye, he's quite a man.

Boy Scout Day at Cavalcade

Cavalcade of the Golden West will be the scene of the Grand Opening Ceremonies for Boy Scout Day (August 3) at the Golden Gate International Exposition when the Boy Scouts of America utilize the largest stage in the world to begin a full day of Scouting activities. Shown above is Rusty Bishop, Cavalcade actor, showing off a span of oxen to Scout Burdell Loring of San Francisco Troop 234. The California Post 234 is in American Legion Boy Scout Troop to inspect the Cavalcade set in preparation for the big day on Treasure Island.

Fun at the San Francisco Fair

All set for the start of a race in the swan boats on the Lake of Nations at the Golden Gate International Exposition are these youngsters. At top speed they will cut through the water at a breath-taking six miles an hour. In the background may be seen the oriental tower rising above the Japan pavilion, on the shore of the Lake of Nations.

SQUALUS SALVAGE WORK DELAYED BY NEW MISHAP

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., (UP)—Navy divers hoped for fog to lift today so they could survey damage done yesterday in a new mishap which again delayed salvage operations on the submarine Squalus with its 26 dead.

As winches tugged on cables to the seventh and last of the pontoons, resting in mud since it plunged with the submersible back to the ocean floor July 13, a heavy wire snapped its shackle. The cable whipped along the deck of the rescue ship Falcon with deadly force.

The wire caused no injury, however, Commander Harry Hartley and Lieutenant-Commander Charles B. Momen having foreseen possibility of such an accident.

SIX HELD ON CHARGES OF KIDNAPING AT LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, (UP)—Five Japanese and a Mexican were held today on federal warrants charging them with participating in the asserted kidnaping in 1938 of H. Yamatado, another Japanese.

Yamatado and two companions were convicted last May 20 of manslaughter in connection with the death of T. Namba, well-to-do Lodi rancher whose body never was found. It was testified he was killed at a gambling club in Los Angeles.

Sale Of Liquor Banned In Two Mexico Towns

CANANEA, Sonora, Mex., (UP)—President Lazaro Cardenas today issued a decree forbidding sale of liquor in Cananea and Nacoziari.

Both are mining towns. The ruling was issued under a federal statute which permits the president to control sale of intoxicating liquor in industrial centers.

THE Book Mark

By JANE VOILES

There are more ways than one of keeping cool on a hot day. Try reading one of the new books about the Arctic region. By means of your imagination, you can transport yourself to the lands of snow and ice in a jiffy. Harry Franck's "The Lure of Alaska" should be cooling and so should "A Guide to Alaska" by Merle Colby. Elliott Merrick's new novel "Frost and Fire" has its setting on the short-summered coast of Labrador. Desmond Holbridge's "Northern Lights" is the account of a happy haphazard expedition to the Labrador coast and Hudson's Bay. The explorer Stefansson has written a book about Iceland.

Our favorite of the cold country books is Neil James' "Petticoat Vagabond Among the Nomads." You might think from her title that Miss James sets out to be "cute" but she really goes places and she doesn't see any fun in an adventure unless it has a few conveniences to be overcome. The nomads among whom she wanders are the Lapps, a jolly little people not much bigger than the Japanese, whose financial assets are reckoned in reindeer instead of dollars.

In a political sense, Lapland does not exist. By the international agreement the Lapps live in the northernmost parts of Norway, Sweden, Finland and a very small portion of north Russia. Some of the Lapps follow their herds of reindeer, some live by fishing, others have taken up farming in a small way. They have the virtues of honesty and hospitality to recommend them, even if they have dispensed with baths since babyhood.

Miss James zigzagged all over Lapland missing nothing. Her great experience was learning to drive a "pukka" a sleigh-like affair drawn by reindeer. Until you master the art and can go swimming along as Santa Claus seems to do in his pictures, you must go through a practice period in which you receive some breath-taking jolts. One minute you are sailing in the air and the next landing with a thud that dislocates vertebrae and rattles your lungs and liver. Once you get the knack, the wide-open snowy spaces are yours.

The Lapps have worn much the same kind of clothing which is bright in color, warm and comfortable for the last thousand years.

The women who are busy keeping house or "keeping tent" in a below zero temperature for ten months of the year don't have to worry about following the latest fashions. There is one little concession to style if one may call it that, white fur is a mark of swank. And the zipper has zipped its way into Lapland as many of the tunics "zip-up." Women don't have to fret over the mending of socks and stockings as they are an unknown quantity in Lapland. The Lapps line their reindeer mocassins with fresh hay. And wouldn't the average boy love to live in Lapland when it comes to early morning dressing! The Lapps go to bed with their clothes on. In the morning, they kick off their reindeer skin covering, take off their cap, give it a good shaking put it on again and are ready for whatever the day may bring forth.

Salted coffee is the favorite beverage. Miss James found herself able to toss off twenty cups a day and still sleep like a top. Reindeer meat, unleavened bread and porridge are the chief foods on the daily menu. For desert, there are cloudberry and Arctic berries (like our cranberries). In a restaurant during the reindeer roundup, Miss James was served a compote of dried California fruits at 12¢ per soup plate.

In the Lofoten islands in Lapland are some of the largest cod fisheries in the world. Miss James who had "to do" as well as "to see," asked permission to go on a fishing cruise. As a result she reported the finest case of seasickness you would want to read about.

ALASKAN TOUR CONCLUDED

him the time to turn on the second fuel tank and so crashed. That was what I was told by the pilot of the plane in which we flew north from Fairbanks.

"I never thought I would look down on the sun, but I had that experience as we were leaving Wiseman. We had made the trip there especially to see the midnight sun and were leaving there as the sun set and sunrise took place. Wiseman is well down in a canyon so that we saw the phenomena to better advantage from the plane.

"The sun slipped below the horizon, perhaps for as much as fifteen minutes, and there was a sort of twilight or pre-dawn all about. The moon did not seem to be suspended in the sky at all. It was more like a lantern which someone had hung out there. It was a most unusual experience. And then, after about fifteen minutes, the sun came peeking over the horizon, and here we were thousands of feet in the air and looking down on it."

Dr. Schaffert said that among the high-lights of his recollections of the trip are the general spirit of friendliness in Alaska and the absence of petty rivalries and jealousies; his visit at the Matanuska colony, of which he has promised to tell us more subsequently; and the exceptionally large gold nuggets which were exhibited by the miners at Wiseman.

Saratoga Race Track Opens 75th Meeting

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Historic Saratoga racetrack, the oldest and most important course in America, opened its diamond jubilee meeting today with the first two stakes of a rich series which has produced most of the national turf champions since the Civil War.

They were the 65th running of the Flash stakes and the 12th renewal of the American Legion handicap, prized events in themselves and measuring sticks for richer events to come in the 30 days until Sept. 2. The weather was threatening, but the track was expected to remain good.

2 WOUNDED AS BANDITS ATTEMPT ILLINOIS TRAIN HOLDUP

KANAKEE, Ill., Aug. 1.—Three bandits employing the technique of Jesse James held up an Illinois Central train between Onarga and Del Rey today but were repulsed in gunfire that wounded one bandit and a mail clerk.

Two bandits escaped, leaving their wounded companion.

The train continued its route from Chicago to Campagna, taking the two wounded men to a hospital at that place.

State Fair Scrip Sale Opens On Tuesday

The regular annual advance sale of scrip tickets for the state fair attractions opens on Tuesday and in El Dorado County the scrip may be obtained from certain of the 4-H Club members, or upon application at the office of the Farm Adviser.

The Lofoten Islands are among the chief sources of Vitamin A as the annual yield of cod is from twenty to forty millions.

The reindeer round-up which is something like our western rodeo is a gala event but the real festival of the year is market time. Miss James missed none of the fun. She was pleased to note that at the dances the older women were as popular as the young ones. Blessed Lapland!

You will find "Petticoat Vagabond Among the Nomads" good hammock reading especially on days when the thermometer soars.

Chilean Mayoress

Wearing the uniform of her party, Senora Graciela Schnacke, mayor of Santiago, Chile, is shown as she marched in a political parade in the capital. She is the wife of Oscar Schnacke, leader of the Chilean Socialist Party.

Household Hint

If you want a prepared article, there are now several good compounds on the market, guaranteed to revitalize leather, one of them being a good cream in liquid form. White leather, so fashionable nowadays, should only be cleaned with a preparation specially compounded for this purpose. Stick to the rules that come with the preparation of any leather-cleaner or revitalizer you may purchase. They have been worked out by experts.

Wife Preservers

A memory board tucked up in a convenient place is a help. On it you can jot down ideas for tomorrow's menu, messages for the family, dates, telephone calls, etc. A blackboard is excellent for the purpose.

Stockmen Will Attend Field Day At Madera

El Dorado County stockmen will be represented at the annual stockmen's field day at the San Joaquin Range Experiment Station at Madera on Wednesday, according to reports received by the farm Adviser's office.

From contacts made at the office it is indicated that at least one car will go from Placerville Wednesday morning to share in the day.

Several farmers at Graton, San Joaquin County, are growing Indian corn for grain this year.
